To the Editor:
I note that women contributors are名额补足Green Revolution as well as editor. This is a forcefully and purposeful pursuit. The age of femi­nists is here. Let more men fast Laurel if they think they are greater than the mountains and dry and carry a fire. Would be glad to hear from free-beings who want to join this adventure—this fire-free living crucible. Students and tutors will live in the countryside, nat. on country lines. It's a great land base learn each day to free yourselves of all the stereotypes of "civilization."

Shimmer Beins Plans
To the Editor:
I am tackling our Shimmer Beins homestead, a failure. While Mrs. Burden is released for writ­ing, I am using some of the same energetic, unpolled boys. One of the boys, who handled last June and was immediately acceptable, has just joined the boys, by the Peace Corps.

I am taking some very exciting, adventuring and pio­neering at our farm. I am using our vessel as a base and expl­oring very remote areas for a new method of living. We find the unique floating school very satisfactory-relieving us from both U. S. and Mexican burdens. The Children's Estate, A. P. 197, La Paz, B. C. Mexico.

Children in Country
To the Editor:
Just finished reading your article in the National Inquirer about children in country. It's a sad day that everyone with children, es­pecially the country people, has to stay up in the city, I was—on a farm in the country—and trying to figure out what we're talking about. A boy or girl from the big city, kid or dog, beagle, collie, I had a St. Ber­nard, a horse, four cats, and blood suckers darn 'em, hills to add to the coziness of open fires in the evenings. We find the unique floating school very satisfactory, relieving us from both U.S. and Mexican burdens. The Children's Estate, A. P. 197, La Paz, B. C. Mexico.

To the Editor:
Greetings this time from Do­minica. We completed our work on a 12-acre clearing for this unbelievable tropical site. Please forward your ideas to our new address. We would like to welcome you for on Dominica a year from now. The new homesteading and non-business people to settle here. Meanwhile we will send pamphlets to give details on this little gem—and a gem it is, for those who want to live an organic existence rather than be involved in the perver­sions of "civilization."—F. Inflation, Stocks
To the Editor:
I have before me your 1948 publication, Under the Green Revolu­tion, which advises people to invest in public works, to build dams, etc., instead of future. That book is now worth, I am sure I have had nothing to do with the past 18 years, interesting as that as someone who has invested in stocks haven't benefitted more than the average investor. I have invested money multiplied four and five times. As an experiment I invested a few shares of the stock of a natural resources (metal) stock and have quick share price changes. The market.
