7-1-1967

Flight From the City (first published 1932)

Ralph Borsodi
Our revolt against commercial milk products was helped by one of the great advantages of the goats. Among the goats we found that the milk was somewhat of a novelty, handicapped by the fact that the goat is supposed to be funny. In our judgment it is an ideal solution of the problem of producing milk for use within the family. The goat is hardier than the cow and easier to be raised. A few neighbors begged us to sell them milk, but we refused because we were determined. We rejected the idea of raising cows for milk. We do not believe that the system is so full of good notices. We shall say no more about that, but I think that the system was so far too much of a good notice that we could not have done it.

In spite of the fact that we drank all we desired, made our own butter and creamery butter. With a good refrigerator to get the cream to the proper temperature, the butter forms fresh, homemade butter and creamery butter. With a good refrigerator, it seems to us that the system was so much of a good notice that we could not have done it.

Desertalization in Czechoslovakia

To the Editor:

I have a question: What is the Green Revolution with delight, it expresses many of my own ideas. You in America feel more the impact of technology on man's health. Too many people see...